

EXTRA

The

World

M'KINLEY

Extra No. 2

"Circulation Books Open to All."

"Circulation Books Open to All."

PRICE ONE CENT.

NEW YORK, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1901.

PRICE ONE CENT.

LATEST NEWS FROM PRESIDENT

CZOLGOSZ, THE ANARCHIST.

M'KINLEY

GAINS!

BUFFALO, Sept. 8.—The following bulletin was issued by the President's physicians at 12 o'clock noon:

The improvement in the President's condition has continued since last bulletin. Pulse, 128; temperature, 101 degrees; respiration, 27.

(Signed)

P. M. RIXEY.

Dr. McBurney is here and will meet the President's physicians in consultation at 3 o'clock.

(Signed)

GEORGE B. CORTELYOU, Secretary to the President.

Dr. Charles McBurney says he has not found a single unfavorable symptom, and that there is not the slightest indication of peritonitis.

GOOD NEWS CHEERS THE INVALID WIFE.

Roosevelt, Hanna and Cabinet Officers Join in Hopefulness Over Afternoon Report.

(From a Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)
BUFFALO, Sept. 8.—The improvement of the President this afternoon has a general feeling of hopefulness and buoyed up Mrs. McKinley, whose condition was beginning to cause some alarm.
The high temperature, so closely watched by the physicians and which has been the gravest manifestation, has begun to abate, as well as the pulse.
The bulletin issued at 12 o'clock was the most reassuring one yet given out. It showed that in the three hours just elapsed the President's temperature had decreased 2 degrees and his pulse 1.08 degrees.
Dr. Charles McBurney, of New York, who had arrived at the house an hour and a half earlier, after making a thorough examination of the President, declared that he had not found an unfavorable symptom.
Hanna Deeply Gratiified.
Senators Fairbanks and Hanna arrived just before the noon bulletin was issued and joined the distinguished company gathered below stairs in the drawing-room.

All were overjoyed when the good news came from the sick-room. The lower temperature and decreased rapidity of pulse were plainly gratifying and increased the hope that the crisis would be safely passed.
Senator Fairbanks left the Milburn house just before 1 o'clock full of hope. He said that the physicians feel certain and confident of the President's recovery.
Dr. McBurney had stated there was not the slightest indication of peritonitis. This opinion of the famous physician carries much weight.
A local physician, a specialist with whom Dr. Parke has consulted, told Representative Alexander that Dr. Parke was exceedingly hopeful.
Salvation in Modern Surgery.
"I feel certain the President will get well," he said to Mr. Alexander. "This is not 1881, but 1901, and great strides have been made in surgery in the last twenty years."
Vice-President arrived at the residence at 12.45. He walked over from the First Presbyterian Church, on Pennsylvania street, where he attended service this morning. He was accompanied by Ansley Wilcox, whose guest he is. Representative Alexander and Judge Albert Haight entered immediately after the Vice-President.
The President, who was free from pain for the first few hours after the shooting, has suffered considerably since, and when unconscious or semi-conscious moans as though in agony. When completely conscious, however, he bravely gives no sign of suffering.
Major and Mrs. Rand, who are intimate friends of the President and Mrs. McKinley, reached Buffalo this morning from Washington, and went immediately to the Milburn house. Mrs. Rand is one of Mrs. McKinley's closest personal friends, and her presence with the President's wife during this trying period will be, it is believed, a great comfort to Mrs. McKinley.

Dr. McBurney was at Stockbridge, Conn., when the summons to come to Buffalo reached him, and he came direct from there. It is explained that his appearance in the case has no immediate significance, and does not in any way reflect upon the attending physicians.
It was simply desired that the best talent in the country in medicine and surgery should be present in order that in the event of a fatal termination of the President's wound there could be no criticism, and his family and friends would have nothing with which to reproach themselves.
Dr. McBurney is considered one of the leading surgeons of the country, and his reputation is world-wide. His counsel is desired, although the President's advisers have the fullest confidence in Dr. Parke, who also enjoys the highest reputation as a surgeon.
Prayer Against Anarchy.
The sermon at the First Presbyterian Church, where Vice-President Roosevelt was in attendance, made frequent references to the calamity which had fallen upon the nation. At its close the pastor, Dr. S. S. Mitchell, delivered a fervent prayer, in the course of which he said:
"Unite, Oh God, the hearts of all lovers of righteousness in earnest reprobation of the anarchic fury of reprobate lives, and whip from the temples of public life men who are willing to temporize with this madness in city and State."
After a hymn, the entire congregation united in singing the national anthem.
Shortly after 1 o'clock, Vice-President Roosevelt and Senator Hanna left the Milburn house. They stopped on the corner to tell the newspaper men of the high hopes they had for the President's recovery.
The Vice-President said with great emphasis that he felt satisfied of the President's recovery, and Senator Hanna interjected the statement that the President's condition, considering the circumstances, could not be more favorable.

Complications might arise, said the Senator, but there were no indications of them up to the present. Senator Hanna then spoke of the newspaper statements that the reports of the physicians were being colored and did not show the President's true condition.
"It is outrageous that such stories should be circulated," said he. "The physicians are giving the facts to the public."
At this point Vice-President Roosevelt, with great earnestness, laid his hand upon the Senator's arm. "Senator, let me put it this way," he said. "The doctors' bulletins are made with a scrupulous understatement of the favorableness of conditions—a scrupulous understatement," he repeated, emphatically.
"That expresses it well," said Senator Hanna.
"Yes," continued Mr. Roosevelt, "if anything, the doctors underestimate the hopefulness of the situation."
Senator Hanna again assented to this statement. He added that it took from forty-eight to seventy-two hours for conclusions to be reached of an absolute character. For the present, the doctors were inspired by the sincerest effort to give the best judgment which medical science could render.
As Mr. Roosevelt and Senator Hanna turned to their carriage an attempt was made to photograph the Vice-President, but he turned away hurriedly.
Robert T. Lincoln's Visit.
Robert T. Lincoln, son of President Lincoln and former Secretary of War, came from the Milburn house soon after Mr. Roosevelt and Senator Hanna retired. Mr. Lincoln expressed the same hopeful view of the situation, and regarded the condition of the patient as altogether favorable.